

- (To be Continued...)
- ⇒ The fourth part of an autobiography deals with Gandhiji's personal principles, practicing sexual abstinence, and developing Satyagraha. This part also deals with his heroic emergence of Indian political scene. He used the weapon of Satyagraha for India's liberation.
 - ⇒ Thus, Mahatma Gandhiji's autobiography covers up a very important part of the Indian history. That period was full of social evils, political slavery, exploitation and injustice.
 - ⇒ Mahatma Gandhi holds an important place in Indo-English prose. In autobiography, he expresses his personal beliefs about truth and Ahimsa. He expresses his thoughts naturally and effectively.
 - ⇒ Before this masterpiece, he wrote many articles for "The Indian Opinion", "Navjivan" and "Young India". He had also written "The History of Satyagraha in South Africa", "Key to Health" and many letters and pamphlets. In all of them he expressed his thoughts and described his experiments in a lucid, forceful, natural and individual style. Thus, before writing this work, he had developed his own fine style.
 - ⇒ That way, "The Story of My Experiments with Truth" is an immortal work. It is a classic. Mahatma Gandhiji is a trend setter in this respect. His whole life could be summed up in two words, Truth and Ahimsa. So I frankly say that Gandhiji's autobiography deals with his constant search of truth.
